Expert neonatal advanced practice nurses are not just clinicians. We are teachers, leaders, and scholars, too. But it takes many years to reach this pinnacle of expertise. Therefore, what do we do to support the rising clinician-scholar? How can we thoughtfully prepare clinician-scholars for ‘life after graduation’? In this session, we will explore the pearls and pitfalls that young clinician-scholars encounter as they grab hold and climb the professional ladder. Amy Jnahn, DNP, NNP-BC

Parents of newborns frequently refuse administration of erythromycin and/or vitamin K for their babies shortly following birth. Subsequently, some babies are discharged with significant risk of future morbidity in relation to vitamin-k deficiency-associated late hemorrhagic disease of the newborn (LHDN), — largely unbeknownst to the parents who have made that decision. After looking at the historical background, the physiology of Vitamin K deficiency and recent literature showing increases in LHDN in the US, we will discuss the ethical principles and the role of the NNP. CONFERENCE OBJECTIVES
This program is designed to prepare the novice neonatal nurse practitioner or student for the National Certification Corporation (NCC) Neonatal Nursing Specialties examination and includes advanced level topics for the seasoned NNP. Expert faculty offer an in-depth review and update of content pertinent to your practice. Track A sessions are designed for the experienced NNP; Track B sessions are designed as a review for the NCC exam. Sessions in both tracks will fulfill educational requirements for NCC re-certification. You will have online access to handouts from both tracks.

You will have the opportunity to:
- review current concepts, trends, and management practices appropriate for the care of the high-risk neonate;
- access knowledgeable individuals involved in the care of the fetus and the newborn;
- network with other professionals involved in high-risk neonatal care; and
- discuss current issues in neonatal care.

CONTINUING EDUCATION CREDITS
The Florida Board of Nursing has approved this conference for up to 28 contact hours.
